Topic	Communicating statistics on poverty and inequality
Summary: Reliable statistics are the cornerstone of sound policy. High-quality poverty statistics enable policymakers to make choices that lead to economic and social benefits for the poor. At the national and policy level, however, having more than one poverty measure can be challenging and will likely require significant dissemination efforts to make the use of additional poverty measures sufficiently widespread. Kazakhstan will share information on the use of data visualization tools on living standards and will demonstrate an interactive dashboard posted on the BNS website. In addition, they will inform about new initiatives to disseminate data on poverty and collaborate with users.
